New to the Crew!

Katie Belton

Director of Community Engagement

Katie was raised in Sheridan and grew up traveling with her family. She graduated from Colorado College as a pre-med biology student, minoring in art history and studio art, and afterward completed a summer design program at the GSD. She lived first on Martha's Vineyard and then in San Francisco before moving back to the mountains. She worked at both the Buffalo Bill and the Arizona State Museums in their Art Conservation labs before moving home in 2014 for the new building transition of The Brinton Museum. While there, she did matting and framing, as well as the exhibit design for the American Indian Exhibition under the guidance of her dear mentor, Father Peter J. Powell. Katie joined SCLT in 2016 to work with this lively and progressive organization that focuses on her other love – being active in the outdoors.

Kary has been visiting Wyoming since she was a child and has brought her family to the HF Bar Ranch for twenty-six consecutive summers. Three years ago, Kary decided to move to Big Horn. She says, "It was the Bighorn mountains, swift creeks, open meadows laid out under blue skies and bubbling clouds that brought me here. It is the people, however, who are keeping me here with warm their welcomes." Her twenty-year experience in development for two major not-for-profit organizations, including her children's school in their hometown of St. Louis, has her aptly prepared to join our efforts in preserving our beautiful heritage.

RED GRADE TRAILS

BLM ENVIRONMENTAL EASEMENT UPDATE

Last May, the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) released its draft Environmental Assessment (EA) on the Red Grade Trails for public review. Since that time, the BLM has reviewed the submitted public comments and conducted additional analysis of the proposed project. During the process, the BLM asked SCLT to resubmit proposed trails that exhibit “independent utility”, or trails and trail segments that are entirely contained on BLM or State lands and would not involve any USFS-managed lands to function properly.

SCLT anticipates that the BLM will release their final draft EA in early April for an additional 30-day public comment period to solicit any additional comments regarding the proposed project on BLM lands. Look for an email from SCLT or a press release from the BLM to highlight this 30-day public comment period. After the upcoming review and comment period, the BLM will again review and address any submitted comments before making a final decision on SCLT’s project proposal.

CONSTRUCTION UPDATE

In February, SCLT received six bids for reconstruction work on existing parking areas located on State lands along Red Grade Road and selected the qualified low bid from GW Construction of Gillette. Work is expected to commence in May and be completed by July. Reconstruction of the parking areas will benefit all types of recreationists who access public lands from Red Grade Road. While the sizes of the reconstructed parking areas will see only modest increases related to attaining proper parking grades, the resulting parking arrangement, ingress/egress, and overall traffic flow will improve greatly. SCLT continues to fundraise the final 10% of costs for this project, estimated at $220,000. Please be in touch if you would like to support this community project and help us meet our goal.
